8. Brief Summary of the Activity/Event:

a. Objectives : To test participants' coding skills and problem-solving abilities in various programming languages.

b. Description:

Round 1: Debugging

Participants were given code snippets in C and Java with intentional errors. Their task was to identify and correct as many errors as possible. Success in this round was determined by the number of errors fixed, with top performers advancing to the next round.

Round 2: Speed Coding

Participants received three problem statements in C. They were required to solve as many problems as possible within a specified time limit. The fastest and most accurate solvers moved on to the final round based on their performance.

Round 3: Blind Coding

In this demanding round, participants were given a problem statement in C and had to code the solution with their screen turned off. This tested their ability to write code from memory and under pressure, with the final evaluations determining the top performers.

c. Outcomes :

Participants displayed strong debugging skills, rapid problem-solving abilities, and impressive performance under pressure. The event highlighted their proficiency in handling coding challenges and adapting to unconventional problem-solving scenarios.

8. Brief Summary of the Activity/Event:

a. Objectives:

The primary goal of this session was to empower participants to craft a visually captivating one-page profile that combines creativity with technical skills. The task was to design a profile using HTML and CSS, featuring the participant's name, photo, and passions as part of their bio. Participants were encouraged to go beyond the code and create a profile that truly pops, with a balance of thematic relevance and visual appeal.

(An Autonomous Institute & Permanently Affiliated to University of Mumbai)

b. Description:

The online contest conducted by Jeffrey Gian, invited participants to put their skills to the test by designing a one-page profile. Participants had the freedom to choose a theme, such as fashion, tech, or nature, and create a profile that was not only creative but also aligned with the chosen theme. The challenge emphasized the importance of a visually engaging design that captures attention and showcases the participant's personality and skills.

c. Outcomes:

Participants enhanced their skills in creating visually engaging profiles by exploring different themes. They learned to design profiles that effectively balance creativity and thematic relevance, gaining experience in crafting profiles that stand out and make a lasting impression. Through this activity, participants developed a deeper understanding of how to combine technical proficiency with creative design to produce a compelling visual presentation.
